We're both rapidly approaching 70 years of age, living on Social Security, and withdrawals from an IRA. We can't afford an attorney, and even if we could, it would make no sense for a $985.00 claim.

Judging from the volume of paperwork we've received, which neither of us can barely pick up, this is probably a waste of time, stationery, and postage. We obviously don't have the knowledge, or expertise, to mount any legal arguments on behalf of our claim. Simply put, we were 'screwed' by Circuit City, and our complex legal system will probably exclude us from recovering our legitimate loss, and pay high-priced lawyers millions in the process.

Regardless, we're submitting this Response opposing to the relief requested in the Objection, filed on behalf of the Debtors.
